Monthly Gatherings

As we previously announced, except for January (when we will hold our Burns Dinner) and February (when we will attend the Masters of Scottish Arts performance at Benaroya Hall), Caledonian Gatherings will be on Sundays from 2:00-4:00pm. The Board has chosen the Sundays following the second Friday of each month. This is not always the second Sunday of a month, so be sure to calculate Gathering dates based on the second Friday of the month.

Since our usual meeting location cannot adjust to a change to Sunday afternoon gatherings, future meetings will be held in the Fellowship Hall at Haller Lake United Methodist Church, 13055 1st Ave. NE., Seattle, WA 98125. This church has a large parking lot and an elevator.

Directions:

On I-5 from the south: Take the exit at NE 130th St, and turn left (west) across the freeway on NE 130th St. Go two blocks west to the first stop light. Turn right and go one long block to N 133rd St., and turn left. The church is on the corner. Turn left immediately to go into the parking lot.

On 1-5 from the north: Take the exit at NE 145th St, and turn right onto NE 145th Street. Go to the first stop light and turn left (south) onto 1st Ave. NE. Continue south for five blocks to N. 133rd St. The church is on the southwest corner on your right. Turn right on 133rd and then immediately left again into the parking lot.

Report on the December Gathering

Switching to a Sunday gathering has been helpful for many Caledonians who have found travel on Friday evenings difficult, both due to winter darkness and the distance they have to travel during rush hour.

The December gathering was held on Sunday, December 11th in the Fellowship Hall of Haller Lake United Methodist Church. We were delighted to see several members present who had previously not been able to come to evening gatherings.

Vienna Scheyer, piper and fiddler, entertained with a variety of Scottish songs for both the small pipe and fiddle. A lovely Christmas tea was provided and enjoyed by all.

Did you know?

Before 1492, the Aedes aegypti mosquito did not live in the Americas. It came from West Africa as part of the Columbian Exchange, probably on ships of the transatlantic slave trade. The mosquito gradually colonized those parts of the Americas that suited its feeding and breeding requirements, and for centuries served as the primary carrier for yellow fever and dengue, viruses that are cousins of Zika.

Together these mosquitos and their fevers decided the fate of empires. In 1697 the kingdom of Scotland attempted to establish a trading colony on the Caribbean shore of Panama. New Caledonia was intended to position Scots to take advantage of Pacific and Atlantic trade networks. A large share of the liquid capital of Scotland and 2,500 eager volunteers went into the effort. Within two years, however, some 70 percent of the Scots were dead of "fever." The Scots' immune systems were unprepared for yellow fever, dengue and malaria—any or all of which might have attacked them—and they paid the price. So did Scotland, which in 1707 accepted union with England partly to pay debts incurred by the disaster.

Most popular Scottish baby names of 2016 revealed

The National Record of Scotland announced on Tuesday that Olivia and Jack were the baby names most parents favoured over the past 12 months.

Last year's top girls' name, Emily, is a close second, while Sophie has dropped from second to third. Charlotte has now entered the top ten with Lily dropping out.

Jack has now been the top boys' name for nine consecutive years. James and Oliver have switched places since 2015, with James now the second most popular name and Oliver third. Harry, Noah and Leo have entered the top ten at the expense of Lucas, Harris and Daniel.

National Records of Scotland registered 24,489 girls and 26,408 boys during this period. There were 4,137 different first forenames for girls and 3,132 for boys. Of these, 4,743 children were given first forenames that were unique to them.

Fiona Hyslop, cabinet secretary for culture, Europe and external affairs, said: "It's always fascinating and fun to see the names Scotland's parents are giving to their newborns. Choosing a name for your child is such a huge decision. It's their introduction to the world and usually stays with them for the rest of their lives.

"The trend for unique names remains far higher than it has been in previous decades, indicating that today's parents are putting a lot of thought into choosing names for their babies. I note that so far, 'Fiona' does not appear in this year's top 100, so it may appeal to parents who are expecting a girl next year and looking for a rarer name."

When should I take down my Christmas tree?

Tradition dictates Christmas decorations should stay up until the Twelfth Night - but not everyone agrees. A quick glance on social media suggests many Scots simply can't wait that long, with New Year's Day a popular time to pack away decorations.

The superstitious will tell you it is bad luck to leave decorations up longer than January 5. But what is Twelfth Night? It refers to the night before Epiphany - the day when, according to the Nativity, the three wise men visited the infant Jesus - which takes place on January 6.

In days gone by, Christmas decorations were left up until Candlemas Day on February 2 - a festival that has all but vanished from public life. Candlemas commemorates the ritual purification of Mary, 40 days after the birth of her son Jesus.

Many department stores now have their decorations packed away by the time they open on Boxing Day.

Who are Scotland's clan chiefs? By Alison Campsie

Scotland's clans may have lost their power and influence but much work is still done to promote the lineage, culture and shared history of some of the country's oldest families. Here we look at eight clans and their chiefs - who include a banker, an estate agent, a gardener and a restauranteur - who continue to promote the bonds forged hundreds of years ago through battle, birth and blood.

Clan Moncreiffe Peregrine Moncreiffe of that Ilk, Chief of the Clan Moncreiffe, and his brother Earl of Erroll, chief of Clan Hay, pictured in Edinburgh in 2009. PIC Ian Rutherford/TSPL Chief: The Hon. Peregrine Moncreiffe of that Ilk

Investment banker Peregrine Hay became chief of Clan Moncreiffe in 1998 following the death of his cousin, Elizabeth. Now known as Moncreiffe of that Ilk after his clan link was recognised by the Lord Lyon, he is also the feudal baron of Easter Moncreiffe, the clan seat, in Perthshire. Schooled at Eton and Oxford University, Moncreiffe is also a Freeeman of the City of London and a Liverymam of the Worshipful Company of Fishmongers.

Clan Murray Chief: Bruce Murray, 12th Duke of Atholl-Born in South Africa in 1960, Murray is a former tea plantation manager and owner of a signage business in Johannesburg. He inherited his title following the death of his father John in 2012. The family have long ties to South Africa, with the 11th Duke professing to have no interest in the title due to his "simple lifestyle" abroad. Despite his scepticism, he worked hard to sustain the Atholl Estates in Perthshire. The 12th Duke attended the Atholl Highlanders Parade at Blair Atholl just days after his father's death.

Clan Arthur Chief: John MacArthur of that Ilk—Mr MacArthur, chief of Clan Arthur since 2004, has been the head gardener at Castle Kennedy near Stranraer, home to the Earl of Stair, for almost 30 years. Clan Arthur, also referred to as Clan MacArthur, once held lands on the shores of Loch Awe opposite Inishaiel with a branch of the clan becoming the hereditary pipers for the MacDonalds of Sleat. Clan Arthur was leaderless for around 230 years after Charles MacArthur of Tirivadich vanished in India in the late 18th Century. Following 15 years of research by a genealogist, the title of clan leader was passed to James Edward Moir MacArthur, a former Coal Board employee of Edinburgh, in 2002. He was succeeded as chief by his son, John, two years later.

Clan Macnab Chief: Jamie Macnab of Macnab—Jamie Macnab, 53, of Edinburgh, is a director of country house sales at estate agent Savills. He became 24th chief of Clan Macnab following the death of his father, James Charles - known as The Macnab - in 2013. The clan's historical territory stretched from west Loch Tay and Killin across Glendochart to Tyndrum. The ancient seat of the MacNabs was a castle on Eilean Ran, an island on River Lochay. It is said a pipe band greeted Jamie Macnab as he was brought home to the family's former home of Kinnell Estate, near Killin, shortly after his birth in Edinburgh. Mr Macnab reportedly wears a signet ring depicting the clan badge, which features the head of a Neish. The two clans were involved in a bloody battle over Christmas 1612 near Loch Earn, with several Neishes beheaded.

Clan Macdonald of Clanranald Chief: Ranald Macdonald—Ranald Macdonald runs a food and jazz empire in London though his string of Boisdale restaurants, which specialises in Scottish cuisine. Following a childhood spent between London and Loch Tay, he studied at the University of St Andrews, reading Scottish history, psychology, medieval history and Arabic culture. He readily claims he learnt more about wine and cigars during his student years rather than his academic subjects. The Macdonalds of Clanranald are considered one of the oldest families in the world. Descended from the Macdonald Lords of the Isles and sea kings of Dalriada, the Clanranalds emerge from the mists, myths and archaeology of the Dark Ages. The historic family seat is Castle Tioram, a ruin in Loch Moidart, Lochaber.

Century Clan Hay Chief: Merlin Hay, 24th Earl of Erroll—A software specialist, Merlin Hay, 24th Earl of Erroll, is also cross-bench member of the House of Lords, and hereditary Lord High Constable of Scotland. Lord Erroll is the son of Sir Iain Moncreiffe of that Ilk and Diana, Countess of Erroll. He was page to the Lord Lyon in 1956. Educated at Eton College and at Trinity College, Cambridge, the Earl, who has been a lieutenant at the Atholl Highlanders since 1974, is a Freeman of the City of London. He continues to head the luncheon club, Puffin's Club, founded by his father. His brother, Peregrine, is head of Clan Moncreiffe (see above) is also a member.

Clan Durie Chief: Andrew Durie CBE—A former Captain in the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Mr Durie went on to have a successful career in the whisky industry which included spells as a director of White Horse Distillers and then later with Allied Distillers. He was a former chairman of CBI Scotland from 1997 to 1999 and has served on the board of the Edinburgh Military Tattoo. Historically, Clan Durie's seat was Durie in the parish of Scoonie, Fife, with Craigluscar, near Dunfermline and Rossend Castle in Burntisland also held by the family. The Duries may have arrived in Britain with the Normans while some research suggests that the family travelled to Scotland in 1069 as part of the entourage of Queen Margaret of Scotland. Today, the Clan Chief lives at Finnich Malise on the edge of the Loch Lomond National Park. His wife Marguerite is of Austrian descent. Mr Durie now sits on the executive committee for Erskine Homes, the veterans' charity.

Clan Sinclair Chief: Malcolm Sinclair, 20th Earl of Caithness—The 20th Earl of Caithness and Conservative hereditary peer served as a House of Lords government whip under Margaret Thatcher from 1984 to 1985. He then served as Minister of State in several key departments, including the Home Office and Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The clan chief is now working to preserve the historic ruins of Castle Sinclair Girnigoe in Caithness, which sits at the heart of the clan's historic territory. Built in the 15th Century, it is the only castle in Scotland listed by the World Monuments Fund and is owned by the Sinclair Castle Trust by Taboola.

Place name of the week: Fort William - An Gearasdan

This is a relatively modern name, coined in English after Prince William, a man unpopular in the Gaelic world for his part in putting down the Jacobite rebellion of 1745.

In modern Gaelic, the name is An Gearasdan 'the garrison', also a reminder of the time when a military presence was here in the wake of the Battle of Culloden. The spelling should in modern Gaelic be An Gearastan; the version with -d- reflects the old spelling, but this was so popular locally even new road signs contain the old version.

Various attempts have been made to rename the town; in the pages of this newspaper [The Scotsman] in 1935 is an article about an organisation known as the 'Fort William Celtic Vigilance Society' applying to have the name changed to Abernevis, as if it were a name of Pictish origin meaning 'the confluence of the Nevis'.

German PoW leaves £400k to Scottish village

A small Scottish village has been rewarded for the kindness shown to a former German prisoner of war after he left them nearly £400,000 in his will.

Heinrich Steinmeyer, a former Waffen SS soldier during the Second World War, was captured in France when he was 19 years old and held in the PoW camp at Cultybraggan near the village of Comrie, Perthshire.

Mr Steinmeyer was born in 1924 and grew up in Silesia - now part of Poland - with only basic education.

He came from a 'very poor' family and worked as an apprentice butcher on a pitiful wage before joining the SS aged 17 and fighting on the Western Front.

He joined the Hitler Youth SS 12th Panzer Division - which has been linked to war crimes, notably the execution of 140 Canadian prisoners in 1944. It was recruited from the ranks of the Hitler Youth and, with 20,000 men, first saw action in June 1944 in the Normandy campaign. Mr Steinmeyer was expected to die defending the Fuhrer, but was captured in the fight for a bridge in Caen.

When he found that his home of Silesia was now part of Poland, he stayed in Scotland after he was released from detention in 1948 and settled in Stranraer where he found work on farms in the area.

He eventually returned to Germany in 1970, found work at the docks in Bremen, and settled in Delmenhorst.

Steinmeyer died in 2013, aged 90, a fortnight after the death of George Carson, a close friend he had made in the village and visited regularly. Two years on, his wish to leave £384,000 to the village has been recognised and has been gifted to the village's local community trust to be spent on local development for the elderly.

The Courier newspaper said part of Steinmeyer's will reads: "I would like to express my gratitude to the people of Scotland for the kindness and generosity that I have experienced in Scotland during my imprisonment of war and hereafter".

Carson's son, who is also called George, told the BBC: "It sounds like an unbelievable story but it's absolutely true.

"My mother and her friends, all school children at Morrison's Academy in Crieff, made friends with Heinrich through the fence of the Cultybraggan camp. I'm not quite sure how they communicated but during these conversations they discovered that Heinrich had never seen a moving picture, so they went up with their push bikes one morning and one of the girls had taken her brother's school uniform and they smuggled him out of the camp through the chain-link fence and into the cinema where he saw his very first film and he was absolutely blown away by the whole experience. I met him a couple of times and he was a wonderful man.

"He had meetings with the Comrie Development Trust in 2008 and asked them to manage his estate on his death. He was quite specific in his will that the money should only be used on the elderly in the village."

Let there be lights – and lasers – at Hogmanay tribute to 70th Festival

The 70th birthday celebrations of the Edinburgh Festival are to be heralded at the climax of the capital's Hogmanay festivities, organisers revealed today. Special effects designers are being brought in to create a one-off laser and light show which will coincide with the traditional fireworks display above Edinburgh Castle. Organisers say the city's most spectacular "midnight moment" in the 24-year history of the festivities will be staged above the historic landmark as 75,000 revellers throng the city centre. An extra £90,000 is being ploughed into the capital's celebrations from the Scottish Government.
